THUG SLAIN SATURDAY IN CAFE HOLDUP

Gun Misfires and Saves Life of Mrs. Wm. Belkey

BANDIT CAME TWICE

Body Is Found at Dawn Short Distance From Restaurant

Peter Clum, 33, who police said was released from San Quentin prison May 18, was shot to death early Saturday at Irvington during an attempted holdup of a restaurant operated by William Belkey.

Claus Bennetsen, 25, who had been working with Clum on a dairy, was arrested as an alleged participant in the robbery attempt.

The fatal shooting took place, Belkey said, when the bandit returned within an hour after an unsuccessful robbery attempt, in which Mrs. Bealkey's life was threatened.

Entering the restaurant with an accomplice, Clum threatened Mrs. Belkey with a gun, and when she turned toward the rear of the store screaming, leveled the pistol and attempted to shoot her. The gun missed fire, and the two men left hurriedly.

Convinced that the two thought she was alone in the establishment, and would return, Mrs. Belkey summoned her husband, who hid himself in the kitchen. Her fears of another visitation materialized about an hour later when Clum again entered. As he stepped toward Mrs. Belkey and made a suspicious move toward his pocket, Belkey discharged his rifle from the kitchen directly into the marauder's chest. The man staggered, lurched to the door and disappeared. His body was discovered early next morning lying in a tomato field several hundred yards away from the restaurant.

According to local police, Clum may have been the perpetrator of a number of thefts in this district the past few days. John Dias, a Newark resident, was held up near Irvington early Friday morning and robbed of a sum amounting to $17.00.

Bennetson, it is said, made a full confession of his part in the attempted robbery to police, and will be arraigned tomorrow before judge J. A. Silva at the Niles justice curt on a count of attempted robbery.

Investigation by the Chapel of Palms, revealed Clum as a native of Pennsylvania. He is the son of Mrs. H. F. Miller, of Gary, Indiana. A brother, John Clum, lives at High Rock, Pennsylvania.

Funeral will be held this afternoon from the Chapel of Palms. Interment will be in the Odd Fellows' cemetery at Irvington.

Several gifts were presented to the guest of honor by her friends. Among those present were the Misses Kathryn, Marcella and Pat Bliss and Estella Moore.

CAMPERS PERILED BY DERAILED CAR IN NILES CANYON

Six Are Endangered When Car Hurtles Over Embankment

Six Oakland and San Francisco vacationists were periled early Saturday morning in Niles Canyon, when three heavily laden freight cars plunged from the Southern Pacific tracks beyond Stoneybrook. One of the cars, loaded with cement passed within twenty-five feet of two camps, in which campers were sleeping.

According to railroad officials, the accident was the result of a jammed brakeshoe, which clung to the wheel of the car until the heat caused it to break and fall beneath the car. In the derailment that followed, three cars hurtled from the track. Two of the big vehicles remained on the right-of-way, which was considerably damaged by the tearing wheels. The train was coming down the canyon.

One of the camps endangered by the plunging cars was occupied by Mrs. M. Frazer, her son, Jack, and daughter, Audrey, and a friend, Jack Gaut, all of Oakland. Two San Francisco youths, Woodrow Mercham and Russell Sewell were sleeping in the other tent.

William Knowland was a visitor in Niles Tuesday morning.

TWO TOWNSHIP MEN VICTIMS OF ATTACK BY CITY HOODLUMS

Both Men Union Members —One Beaten By Four Thugs

Sporadic violence, following in the wake of the general strike in San Francisco, assumed a local significance Sunday night when Louis Fonseca, of Centerville, and Arthur Duarte, of Niles, were attacked by four men on Mission street in San Francisco.

Duarte and Fonseca, employees at a San Francisco foundry, were accused by the hoodlums of being strikebreakers. Fonseca was beaten severely about the chest, face and legs. He was taken to the Central Emergency Hospital with serious contusions. Duarte escaped his attackers by fleeing down a dark alley.

Both were union men and were not strike breakers. They were employed previous to the labor troubles.

The two were attacked as they were going to their room after a trip from Niles. They had been homo a week on a forced vacation because of the strike.

Duarte, whose home is on Santos Avenue, had been commuting to San Francisco previous to the strike. He had recently decided to room with Fonseca in San Francisco.

None of the attackers were apprehended by police.

Frazier-Lemke Amendment Provides Debt Adjustment

Provisions of the Frazier-Lemke amendment to the national bankruptcy act do not release the the farmers from their debts but do provide a last resort to protect the farmers from losing their property in event that it is impossible to find any other way through debt adjustment committees to scale down their obligations, was stated today by Eric Ruus, chairman of the Alameda County Farm Debt Adjustment Cmmittee.

Interpretation of the Frazier-Lemke amendment, which was signed by the President on June 28, was received by Ruus from the California Farm Debt Adjustment Committee, of which T. C. Tucker is chairman with headquarters at San Francisco. There are now fifty-four voluntary county farm debt adjustment committees in California, according to report received here. The committees are working on a voluntary basis to assist farmers who, due to prevailing economic conditions, require a readjustment of all their finances. The committees are cooperating also with the county conciliators appointed by the federal courts.

"According to the interpretation of the Frazier-Lemke amendment, it is apparent that the work of the Farm Debt Adjustment Committee of this county will be considerably affected and unquestionably increased," Ruus said. "The farmers who can be helped by the work of our committee, should seek the relief provided by the Frazier-Lemke amendment only as a last resort.

"It is the opinion that under this new amendment the local farmer requiring relief from his financial obligations should apply first of all to the County Farm Debt Adjustment Committee. If it is not possible for this committee to secure necessary scale-downs, extension or compositions on a basis agreeable to both debtor and creditors, the committee will then recommend to the county conciliator what action in its opinion, the conciliator should take with regard to the farmer making application for an adjustment. Such recommendations, in most cases will be accompanied by the suggestion that the conciliator first attempt a settlement without committing the farmer to bankruptcy under the Frazier-Lemke amendment."

Ruus stated that the County Farm Debt Adjustment Committee will meet regularly, depending on the number of applications it receives from farmers for hearing. There is no charge made to farmers who present their case and the work of the committee is on a voluntary basis. Members of the committee are: H. C. Zuckerman, August May, Rudy Stenzel, C. A. Rinderspacher and J. L. Donovan.

Epic Supporters Will Give Series of Talks

Charles L. Heiser, epic supporter of Upton Sinclair's candidacy for the nomination for governor of California on the Democratic ticket, will speak at a number of nearby towns and cities early in August. In his itinerary will be the following places, all within easy reach of this district: Palo Alto on August 2, Burlingame on August 3, San Francisco on August 4 and Oakland on August 6 and 7.

Post Office Strip Surfaced Last Week

To be put to harder usage since the installation of Nagli's creamery, the strip of road between the post office and the milk concern was macadamized last week-end.

The work, ordered by Judge J. A. Silva, and done by E. E. Dias, was completed Monday. The work was somewhat delayed, Silva said, due to difficulty in securing the necessary oil because of strike conditions.

The new strip will do away with a dusty drive, both for the milk concern and for the post office staff.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Fournier have returned from a vacation in southern California.

FARLEY DECLARES ADMINISTRATION IS NEUTRAL

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—"The national administration will take no part in the Democratic primary election in California."

Thus did Postmaster General James A. Farley bluntly inform Democratic leaders and gubernatorial candidates who have been interested in getting the New Deal administration to discredit Upton Sinclair, also Democratic candidate for governor, that he or President Roosevelt would have nothing to do with their latest attempt to "stop Sinclair."

The statement was made soon after his arrival in Los Angeles Thursday morning.

"Nor will I, in my capacity as national chairman, make any attempt to influence the results of the primary. Any statement that the administration is favoring any candidate is baseless," Farley added.

"The attitude in California will be one of strict neutrality. The Democrats of California are fully capable of settling their own affairs."

As a result, political observers are certain today that Sinclair will get the full endorsement of the administration after the primary election, the same as anyone else of the Democratic nominees successful in the August 28 balloting.

TOMATO GROWERS EXTEND SIGN-UP PERIOD ONE WEEK

75 Per Cent of Acreage Backs Drive To Raise Price

Definite action by tomato growers, who have organized to secure a higher price for their product, was postponed another week, Tuesday night, when growers decided that they would circulate petitions among their associates during the next week. A 90 per cent signup is expected by Tuesday night of next week.

Growers of the San Jose district, and a number from this region, met at San Jose Tuesday night and decided that they should get a price of $15.00 a ton for their product. The decision is the result of a study of the crop conditions and the market. It is estimated that there has been a decrease of 1000 acres in Santa Clara county alone. There has been considerable loss due to blight. Extreme heat in Indiana and Ohio lead growers to believe that there will be a shortage of the eastern crop.

In view of the obvious shortage, the growers feel that they are justified in demanding a higher return from the canners. A more united front is sought by the growers, who will attempt this week to sign up the remaining several thousand acres.

Camp Fire Girls At Summer Camp Adahi

Equipped to spend a part of the summer in outdoor activities, Washington Township Camp Fire girls left yesterday for Camp Adahi. The girls were taken to the camp by their parents.

Mrs. J. E. Townsend, guardian, accompanied by Miss Muriel Fournier and Miss Lois Abrott, councellors, left for the camp Sunday morning, to make preparations for the arrival of the girls.

Plans to hold the camp this year materialized after a delay caused by the recent infantile paralysis scare in the state. A medical okeh was given the trip.

Don M. Leidig, mayor of Hayward, visited with Norman H. Parks Wednesday afternoon.

FRANK P. AZEVEDO, WELL KNOWN FARMER, SUCCUMBS LAST WEEK

Resident of Mission San Jose for Fifty-two Years

Stricken with a heart attack after several months of failing health, Frank P. Azevedo, well known Mission San Jose rancher, passed away at his home on the Irvington road at 6:20 last Wednesday evening. Death came as a shock to his family and friends, who had held hopes for his ultimate recovery.

Azevedo, who had lived in Mission San Jose for 52 years, was 57 years of age. He was a native of Portugal, and had come to this district with his parents in 1877.

Versed in farm methods and a student of agriculture, Azevedo was for more than twenty years superintendent of Linda Vista, the old Stevens place. He also owned and ran his own ranch. He was regarded as an authority on many farm questions.

In addition to his activities as a farmer, Azevedo was for a number of years a buyer for several important fruit companies and packing houses. He was active in social and civic affairs being a member of both council No. 1 and of the I. D. E. S., and the U. P. E. C.

READING OF POETRY OVER RADIO STIRS INTEREST

Nell Farington Myers, poet, at the request of the Lena May Leland, the "Friendly Lady" of the "Friendly Hour" of KQW, read three of her poems to the radio audience recently.

The request came as the result of insistant demands of radio listeners, who have heard many of Mrs. Myers' poems read over the air on different occasions during the past few years. Many asked that the poet read her own work.

Mrs. Myers read "Symphony," published in the Anthology of American Lyric Poets this year by the Galleon Press; "California," from the volume, "California Poets, published by Helen Hoyt; and a poem dedicated to the Camp Fire Girls of Washington township. All three pieces have excited intense interest in literary circles.

A radio announcement, made over KQW this week, told of the vast increase in fan mail since the reading, and Mrs. Myers will no doubt make other appearances on the air. It is with satisfaction that this district notes the recognition given one who is engaged in worthwhile creative work.

BUSINESS NORMAL AGAIN IN WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP

Police Patrol Is Retained In District During Strike Peace

Light effects of the general strike, felt generally throughout Washington township last week, gave way to normal business activity this week, according to local merchants.

Food stores, following a rush of alarmist shoppers early last week, noted a quiet period over Friday and Saturday, with sales approaching the usual level Monday. Sales over the two weeks period averaged up to those of the pre-strike weeks, store managers said.

A shortage of gasoline, which caused service stations to close for several days last week, was immediately remedied. The motor fuel was at no time noticeably lacking.

Niles barber shops, closed by union edict on Tuesday of last week, resumed their service Thursday. Several local barbers stated that the deputation was made up of authorized union barbers, and that they were not "radicals." Other barbers held a different opinion.

Prune growers, faced with the trucking of their produce to the dryers, hailed the strike end with glee. It had been feared that attempts to move the fruit during the strike, had it continued, would have caused outbreaks. Local police, however, had been keeping a sharp outlook for disturbances.

The Niles "home guard, formed last Monday at a special meeting of the Niles Chamber of Commerce, found things pleasingly quiet in this district. There was no need for mobilization at any time. The citizens' group, under the leadership of rational buinessmen, was formed solely to protect local property from damage in event of demonstrations.

Patrol of the district by deputy sheriffs was continued this week.

FORMER U. C. STAR HURT IN CANYON AUTO CRASH

Joe Kintana, former University of California basketball captain and star forward, narrowly escaped serious injury last Wednesday night when his car plunged through a fence near Brightside in Niles canyon.

Kintana, who stated that he was returning to Avon from San Jose, suffered a badly bruised hip. He was treated by a Niles physician.

The crash occured when Kintana dozed at the wheel at about 2:30 Thursday morning. He was picked up by Jim Booras, Willard Hatch and Lovell Scott, all of Niles, who were returning from Pleasanton.

COURT BANISHES NEGRO VAMPS FROM TOWNSHIP

Three negro women, who pleaded guilty to a vagrancy charge before Judge J. A. Silva in the Niles justice court last Friday, were given suspended sentences with the proviso that they keep out of Washington township for at least two years.

The women, Helen Wilson, Mae Johnson and Billie Farrar, were arrested June 29, following complaints that they had conducted themselves immorally in Irvington. The women were booked on vagrancy charges when officers failed to get persons victimized by the women to file charges against them.

NEWARK MAN VICTIM OF ROAD HOLDUP THURSDAY

Forced to halt his machine by bandits after a chase of several miles early Thursday morning, John Dias, Arden Salt company employee, was robbed of $17.00 and his driver's license.

The theft victim stated that the thugs fired a shot into his car after he had brought it to a halt. The bullet passed through the sidecurtains on the driver's side and lodged in the dash board. Dias, by dodging to the right as he brought his vehicle to a halt, avoided injury, it is said.

After slapping him in the face several times for "not stopping soon enough," the bandits took Dias' money and fled. He immediately informed police.

MORELLA WILL BE TRIED TOMORROW FOR BATTERY

Jose Morella, arrested several weeks ago for the alleged beating of Frank Spicciani, Niles, merchant, will be tried n a battery count tomorrow at the Niles justice court.

The trial has been delayed several times in order that Morella might arrange for his defense, and so that an investigation might be made into his sanity. He was adjudged sane after an investigation last week.

The insanity investigation was recommended by authorities because of Morella's seeming inability to keep out of trouble. He has served two county jail sentences so far.

WOMAN GASHES HUSBAND WITH BUTCHER KNIFE

Stabbing Is Second Committed In Month By Mrs. Harry Tarr

Harry Tarr, of Niles, was stabbed in the left hand by his wife Friday night. Both were intoxicated, officers who investigated said.

It is the second time this month that Mrs. Tarr has wielded the same butcher knife to do injury. The first stabbing occurred at a party in the Tarr residence on the Fourth of July. At that time Mrs. Tarr attacked her husband. Her brother, Jack Gusman, stepped between the two and in trying to prevent a blow aimed at Tarr received the point of the knife in one eye. The use of that eye was entirely destroyed by the knife thrust.

Tarr was treated for his injury by Dr. N. Catherine Holden, who took eight stitches in the wound.

Natalie Clamps On the Lid

By EDWARD E. MONTROY

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

DICK NEWTON'S heels came down on the pavement with the staccato clip of a man either in haste or suffering from some mental disturbance. From the forbidding scowl on his usually too serene, handsome face it was obviously anger that was driving him along the street. And anger it was! He was furious at himself—at his fiancee, Natalie Waverly—and more especially at his future mother-in-law. He had felt that something was wrong the minute he had entered his fiancee's apartment that evening. Tired out from a hard day at the office and looking forward for a pleasant restful evening, he had found Natalie with her blue eyes still dewy from recently shed tears.

"Dearest, what's the matter?" he asked, kissing her eyelids gently.

"Oh, Dick, it's mother," she wailed. "I'm so worried about her."

"Is she worse?"

"N-no. No, but she isn't getting strong as she should and the doctor said today she needed a complete change and that she must not attempt to spend the long severe winter here. He suggested Florida."

"Haven't you—have you enough money to manage it?"

In reply Natalie burst into tears. His brain was working rapidly as he comforted her. He had had no idea that his fiancee and her mother were in such straitened circumstances.

"Sh-hhh, Natalie. We must do something. Don't cry. It breaks my heart. I can't bear to see you so miserable. Of course we can't let her stay here if there's any danger—to her health. But, oh, Natalie darling, I haven't saved a cent toward our little home yet. Lord knows where the money goes, and this will mean that I'll have to wait that much longer for you."

"Dick, would you really be willing to help? You're an angel—you're too good!"

"Hush. Natalie, don't let me hear you say that again. How much will it take?"

"If only she could go alone, but there'll be two of us, you see."

"You're going away—leave me?" he asked, stunned. It was the first time he had really taken in the situation.

"But it'll only be a few months and I'll write every day and besides it'll be just as hard on me. One good thing, you won't have me near to spend so much money on all the time in your dear generous way; ten dollars for one evening's entertainment and flowers or candy every day. It's ridiculous!"

"But I love to spend it on you. You don't seem to understand," he said, his voice breaking. "I can't let you go, Natalie. It's asking too much."

When he left that evening and went furiously down the street it had all been settled. He was to send on every cent he could and they would try to make out on it. He laughed harshly as the irony of the situation came more and more clearly to him. He was to work like the devil and deny himself every little comfort in order to keep his fiancee away from him.

The following Saturday he stood under the trainshed and watched the train crawl out of the station with Natalie and her mother on board. Then he hurried back to the office and worked over a plan for increasing his sales so that his commissions would help meet the added expense. He would not have his future mother-in-law thinking he wasn't able to provide, so he worked night and day until he could double the amount Dorothy had said they would need.

At last a bright spring day brought them back to him.

"I can't believe you're here," he said at the train. "Let's take your mother home, then have a little spin."

Out on the highway together at last Natalie said excitedly:

"Dick, darling, will you be very mad if I tell you something?"

"Good lord," he thought, "I guess she wants to take her mother to Europe this time," but he merely answered:

"You couldn't make me mad if you tried."

She took a slip of paper out of her bag and held it toward him.

"A certified check for $2,200!" he exclaimed. "Natalie, how'd you make it? Real estate?"

"I didn't. You did," she laughed. "You see, Dick, I thought you were spending too much and hadn't saved a cent in the six months we'd been engaged, so I practiced a little deception by pretending we needed the money. Mother was furious, but she finally consented to help me carry it through."

"You little imp," he said, putting his arm around her. "Why—we can get married right away, can't we?"

"Any time," she answered shyly. "Mother and I made my trousseau in Florida."

"Natalie, you're the most satisfactory little person I ever knew. I never saved so much in my life before," he laughed. "You'll certainly have to do our banking in the future."

"I will, but I promise never to clamp on the lid quite so tight again," she replied happily.

Sunken Treasure Ships

The sunken treasure ships lying in silent repose deep down in Davy Jones' locker continue from age to age to dazzle adventurers, and are the bait to lure modern salvors with their batteries of pneumatic drills, coffer-dams, compressors, dynamite and pile drivers in attempts to bring the golden haul to the water's surface. Large capital and patience are all that is required to place these illimitable fortunes within the reach of those treasure hunters, who in their dreams ever hear the call of John Silver's shrill parrot: "Stand by to go about! Pieces-of-eight! Yo ho! Pieces-of-eight!"

Bats That Destroy Fruit

Bats are found in most countries, and tropical lands have species that live on fruit. In Australia, these bats, known as flying foxes, since their faces resemble that of a fox, do enormous damage in orchards. They travel in large colonies uttering screaming cries, nibbling at fruit while hovering before it, often taking a large piece away. When this happens they behave like domestic fowls, for all the others follow the one with the prize.

The Prune Industry

The prune industry started in the East in 1854, but failed because climatic conditions were not favorable to the production of suitable fruit. About 1863 the industry started in California, where it grew rapidly. In 1929 the output was 284,000,000 pounds.

An Item Veto

Some states and municipalities give to their governors or mayors the power to strike out items in appropriation bills without vetoing the whole bill or ordinance. There is no such leeway given to the President with respect to acts of congress.

"Cotton Is King"

"Cotton is king" is an expression used by James H. Hammond in the senate in March, 1858. The figure of speech meant that so important was the state of the cotton industry that its condition ruled the destiny of men connected with it.

An old tree guarding the White House gate has often been referred to as the "Bulletin Tree" because of the claim that bulletins were posted on it hourly from the doctors at the bedside of the wounded President Garfield.

Every time the telephone bell rings in Vienna, both the caller and the receiver have to pay part of the toll, and the rule applies even when the operator calls the wrong number.

The Negro's Immunities

The negro's immunities differ with locality. In America he has shown more immunity than the whites to malaria, yellow fever, measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria. He is largely free from hemorrhoids and varicose veins; but he is more susceptible to tuberculosis, diseases of the heart, lungs and kidneys, and to influenza.

Start of Shaving

The Egyptians commonly shaved their beards, except in time of mourning. Alexander the Great ordered his Greek soldiers to shave (365-323 B. C.), and about the same time the custom was introduced into Rome. Pliny says that Scipio Africanus was the first Roman who shaved every day.

Angora Cat Thrives on Diet of Woolen Goods

Istanbul.—A white Angora cat with a mothlike appetite has become a scourge to the residents of the Istanbul suburb of Psamatia.

The feline, which has one green and one blue eye, has developed a passion for wool. It eats large holes in jerseys and berets, gently gnawing and swallowing the wool.

Driven out by its owner, the cat has been visiting all the neighboring houses in search of woolens.

A Lucky Spill

JACK REID was riding his horse, Black Beauty, home from an afternoon gallop by the sea, and it was a mere chance that he took the crossroads home, and so he saw the gypsy encampment with its romantic setting of dark pine grove, bright fires, and picturesque people.

If Bessie had loved him as she had said, why, perhaps they, too, might have been on their honeymoon now, walking about the old Reid place, where Jack was now a successful "gentleman farmer," as the saying goes. But ambitious Bessie Barnes had been fickle as she was lovely, and when she met George Gray, one of the richest men in the land, she had fallen in love with his wealth. And so Bessie was going to marry George Gray! Jack could not get the girl out of his mind.

That had been a week ago, and Jack was still glooming over it, for Bessie had been the first girl he had ever loved.

A little further on, just before he climbed the last hill to his house, he met an old gypsy woman, a rather unkempt creature with a gay red bandanna tied over her head, supporting herself on a tall staff, bent and gnarled as she was herself.

At sight of him, she scuttled into the road and held up a cupped palm. "Cross me palm with silver, sir?" she smiled toothlessly at him, as the horse stopped suddenly.

Jack grinned and searched in his pockets for a piece of silver, finally bringing out a cartwheel dollar that he carried for "luck." He dropped it into her palm and accepted her gratitude with careless impatience.

The old woman grasped his hand eagerly, holding it close to her eyes to see the lines.

"A dark lady loves you—alas—she loves—money—she has gone—a stern man coming—perhaps a soldier—a great man—and a woman—a girl—a pretty thing—young and golden and still never loving a man—and then, your honor, follows love of a fair lady—undying happiness—and a long life!" She bowed humbly and after his muttered thanks she scuttled away, never pausing once to see what happened to Jack Reid.

And things began to happen rapidly, while Jack still smiled over the gypsy's fortune.

Suddenly, without warning of any kind, a large automobile mounting the hill from the other side, came glaringly over the top, and Black Beauty, terrified out of his senses, jumped into the air and bolted, with Jack's whole strength pulling on the reins.

Of course the car stopped, and a man and a young girl hurried up the hill to see what had become of Jack Reid and his horse.

"Ah!" screamed the girl and covered her eyes, for just as that moment Black Beauty had managed to throw his master, and went galloping madly into the twilight. When they reached the fallen horseman, they found Jack unconscious. The man, a stern, soldierly looking man, went running back to the automobile for a first aid kit, and when the car stopped beside Jack, the chauffeur aided in restoring him to consciousness.

The girl climbed back into the tonneau and whispered to an elderly woman who sat there, eager eyed, sympathetic.

"Oh, granny, I am afraid that he has been killed—a young man, riding a wonderful horse—we must have frightened the horse coming up over the hilltop—he ran away—"

Just then the door opened and the tall man put in his head. "Mother," he said to the old lady, "our car frightened a horse—it bolted and the rider has been thrown. I have just restored him to consciousness—says he lives in that large white house there, beyond the brick wall. Felix and I will carry him across. Sara, will you drive the car over there?"

Within a half hour, Captain Grinham shook hands with the doctor who had been hastily summoned and told him that he was glad that Mr. Reid had not been badly hurt.

"A broken leg is bad enough," he added, "and I am mighty sorry that he will be confined to the house for a while. I am leaving my mother, Mrs. Grover Grinham, and my daughter, Sara, and I will pick them up on my return from Washington. Both of them are nurses, and they insist on staying as the accident was the fault of our car. Mrs. Smith, the housekeeper, tells me there is plenty of room here."

So it happened that the next morning when Jack Reid opened bored eyes, it was to see no white-capped nurse but a charming vision of loveliness in a pink linen frock.

"Granny does not get up until ten o'clock," she explained as she deftly set a breakfast tray before him, "and so I am the first nurse. She will be happy to come in later—you will adore Granny!"

Jack grinned and almost forgot to eat the delectable breakfast. It was such a comfort to look at the pretty thing, so gay and so competent—so utterly adorable! In another week he had forgotten all about fickle Bessie—in a month he was engaged to marry Sara!

Susie Balances the Budget

By MABEL I. CLAPP

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

"WHAT this family needs is a budget," said Sam oracularly.

The monthly battle of the bills was over, and Susie in a state of exhaustion reclined on the couch with Sammy on the hearth rug.

"Every one must choose and judge values in money matters," he went on. "It teaches discrimination, trains one in a sense of values.

"Now Sue, don't be a little fathead. You're not likely to sprain yourself putting figures down in a book, and if you developed the practical side of your nature more you wouldn't be so likely to be gypped by your friends."

"I don't like figures," Susie objected.

"This isn't a geometrical theorem, Honey. You can add, can't you?"

"Not long rows," said Susie firmly. "They never come out twice alike."

The battle of the budget was joined, but in the end, Sammy, who was a diplomat as well as an orator, prevailed, for he had Susie persuaded that budgeting was one of life's rosiest pastimes.

"It really isn't any trouble at all," said Susie, displaying the neat little leather covered book to her mother. "You just keep track of what you spend."

"But what for?" insisted Mrs. Jarvis. "Why bother?"

"Well," said Susie doubtfully, "Sammy says then you know where your money goes."

"You know where it goes anyway, if you count your change," said Mrs. Jarvis impatiently.

It was with some pride that Susie displayed her book to Sammy at the end of the first month. "Great work, old girl," was his comment as he surveyed the neat work and added totals with what seemed to Susie lightning speed. "You see, you're beginning to get results already. Most of the time before your allowance has been gone at the end of the month, and now you have $22.70 left over."

"Oh, but I haven't," objected Susie. "I've spent it all and had to borrow $10 from my personal allowance."

Sammy sighed heavily and girded up his loins for the battle of endeavoring to demonstrate statistically that Susie had failed to keep track of all her expenditures and that it was absolutely necessary to do so.

* * *

"I'm celebrating," announced Mrs. Jarvis one sunny morning two months later as she dropped in on her daughter. "I got my dividend check from the Dome mines and we could do a little shopping, have lunch at Bullock's and go to the matinee."

Susie raised a somewhat tense face from a page of figures. "I don't know," she said slowly. "I wanted to get this thing done today and off my mind."

"Good heavens," said her mother. "Are you struggling with that budget?"

"I'm not going to give it up till I get it," said Susie stubbornly. "Last month I spent too much and made it up out of my own allowance, and this month I've spent $12.43 more than I had to begin with and I have $1.55 left."

"Well, my goodness," said her mother. "I don't see how anyone can expect to do better than that."

"It ought to be even," said Susie wearily. "It should balance. This," Susie indicated a column, "is the food allowance. We set aside 30 per cent for that and it comes to $45 a month."

"That's a dollar and a half a day, isn't it?" said her mother. "Well, why don't you just put down a dollar and a half for each day. That would make that column come out right."

Susie raised rather startled eyes to her mother. "I wonder if it would," she muttered.

"Of course it would," said Mrs. Jarvis impatiently. "And if you figure out what the right amount should be for all the other items and put it down it couldn't help but be right. And that would save all this bother of trying to remember and keeping track."

Susie excitedly seized a sheet of paper and began copying figures. "Why didn't I think of that," she cried. "Mother, you're a wonder."

It was the work of a short half hour to copy a new budget with its preordained figures. "And how much better it looks, too," said her mother with satisfaction, "with the rows all alike."

* * *

"What did Sammy have to say about the budget?" asked her mother a few days later.

"Well, to tell the truth, he didn't have hardly anything to say. He just seemed at a loss for words," said Susie. "You know, Mother, I think Sammy just wanted to see if I could figure that out for myself. We aren't going to bother with a budget any more," she went on, "and I'm glad of it, for it's a kind of nuisance. But there's no point, really, in keeping on with a thing once you've mastered it."

HIDE TRIBAL DANCES FROM WHITES' GAZE

Pueblos Guard Area for Colorful Ceremonial.

Salt Lake City.—Many queer but colorful dances and ceremonies of the ancient tribes still are held annually, free of the curious gaze of the white man, Mrs. Marina La-Juan Hopkins, full-blooded Pueblo Indian princess, told a group here.

Dear to the heart of the Pueblo Indian is the secret of the Blue fake dance, a ten-day ceremonial yet unobserved by white men. Strangers are not allowed within a radius of 25 miles when the dance, staged annually to the staccato pounding of tom-toms, is being held, Mrs. Hopkins, daughter of an Indian clan chieftain, said. To her tribesmen she is known only as Princess Popshales.

Must Marry Out of Clan.

Indian maidens of the numerous clans in the Pueblo tribe are expected to marry a member of another clan, the princess explained. She never marries a member of her own circle. This custom tends to keep a closer unity among the tribesmen.

Each spring tribal dances and weird chants are held as prayers are given to the gods to bring success to the crops of the coming season. In the fall every man of the tribe arms himself with clubs and other primitive weapons—guns being taboo—for the annual drive on rabbits. The meat from the animals is hung on lines to dry, she explained. During the winter the Indians eat the dried meat.

No Razors Are Used.

Indians, known for their smooth, whiskerless faces, pluck the hairs from their skin, Mrs. Hopkins said. Razors or sharp instruments never are put to their faces.

Another peculiar ceremony conducted annually by her tribe is the "dance of the three bridges." Mrs. Hopkins admitted there was not exactly much dancing to the ceremony, but described construction of three bridges over a deep canyon. On one sits the elder Indian men, the younger bucks on the second and youths who had not married on the third. Songs and prayers are sung back and forth, chasing evil spirits from the tribe.

Movement of Earth Is Revealed at Institute

Philadelphia.—Visual proof that the earth rotates is given by a device now on display at the Franklin institute.

The machine, made by Leopold Pessel, Philadelphia, was donated to the institute by Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Binder, Philadelphia. It consists of a thin steel cable 85 feet long, weighing but nine pounds, and a pendulum. Dr. Howard McClenahan, director of the institute, said that the device, known as a Foutalt pendulum, is the only means by which the effect of the earth's rotation can be actually demonstrated.

A steel shell, also contributed by the Binders, was attached to the bob of the pendulum, which hangs from the roof skylight to the basement.

Actual evidence of the earth's movement is shown in the "pull" influenced on the pendulum after it is set in motion in a north-south swing at right angles to the spinning of the earth. The bob moves gradually until it develops an arc, east and west, or parallel with globular rotation. Then, with no more "pull" being exerted, the machine continues to swing. This process requires about nine hours and proceeds at the rate of about ten degrees an hour.

Wyoming to Feed Elk

Jackson, Wyo.—Preparations are under way to care for the 14,000 elk that were driven from the hills last winter by the heavy snows. Cottonseed cake and corn are the principal feeds used.

Preserving Beef on Farm

Any part of a beef carcass may be preserved by corning. Cut the beef into five or six-pound pieces and rub with salt. Pack these chunks in a clean vessel of stoneware or hardwood and cover with a pickle made of one and a half pounds of salt, one ounce of salt peter, one-quarter pound of sugar or sirup and one gallon of pure water. Allow the meat to stand in this pickle for about two weeks. It may then be smoked lightly to improve the flavor or it may be allowed to hang some time.

Lice Are Common on Young Cattle

Use Raw Linseed Oil Before Pasturing, Recommended for Control.

By C. L. Blackman, Specialist in Dairy Husbandry, Ohio State University. WNU Service.

Before cattle go to pasture in the spring is the best time to rid them of lice. Raw linseed oil is the best material to use.

The oil should be brushed thoroughly into the coat and all over the animal, and then thoroughly brushed out. The lice, creeping through the coat of the animal, become covered with a thin film of oil which clogs their breathing organs. The process repeated a second time ten days later kills the lice which hatch after the first treatment.

A day or so after the treatment the cattle take on a dirty appearance. This is remedied by rubbing the animal with a damp cloth dipped into warm water. The treatment must be followed by careful grooming to remove loose, matted hair.

Lice are found most commonly on the younger cattle, which are not so carefully groomed as the milking herd. They concentrate usually on the shoulders, the withers, and about the neck.

Cattle that rub against fences and trees are seeking relief from itching caused by lice. So are cattle that scratch their heads and necks with their hind feet. Dirt on these parts of the body, put there by the scratching, is almost a certain indication of the presence of vermin.

Silver Service for Ships

The Navy department says that when silver pieces are presented to ships of the navy, they are kept on board as long as the ship is in service. When the ship is decommissioned, the silver is sent to the general supply office at the place of decommission and kept in storage until another ship is built and given the same name, at which time the silver is presented to the new vessel. If a ship is not given the same name, the service is usually given to a ship whose name is connected with it in some way. For instance, the silver service from the U. S. S. Indiana is used on the U. S. S. Indianapolis.

Going-to-the-Sun Mountain

The name "Going-to-the-Sun" was given to the mountain by the Blackfeet Indians in honor of the legendary visit of Sour Spirit, who came from the sun to teach them to shoot straight, to build their tepees and to hunt buffalo successfully. The entire designation was "The-face-of-Sour-Spirit - who - went - back-to-the-Sun-after-his-work-was-done mountain." The highway skirting this mountain in Glacier National park is called Going-to-the-Sun highway.

Indians and Horses

Horses were not known to the Indians prior to the advent of the white man in America. The first horses seen by the mainland Indians were those of the Spanish invaders of Mexico. A few years later De Soto brought the horse into Florida and westward to the Mississippi, while Coronado, in 1541, introduced it to the Indians of the Great Plains.

Cubit and Span

The cubit and span are measures of length. A cubit in English measurement equals 18 inches; in ancient Egyptian, 20.61; ancient Greek, 18.25; ancient Roman, 17.4; ancient Hebrew, 17.58. A span is the distance from the end of the thumb to the end of the little finger. In English measure it is 9 inches.

Soy Bean Responds to Soil Sweetener

Limestone, When Added to Manure, Found to Greatly Boost Yield.

By C. J. Badger, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

"Believe it or not," soy beans which are often spoken of as an acid tolerant crop will produce from two to five times as much hay to the acre, when given the benefit of limestone on some of the light-colored soils.

Evidence showing the value of an application of the "soil sweetener" is revealed in the results of four years of tests at two soil experiment fields of rather low productive levels maintained by the state university.

At one field, where the soil is a light gray silt loam, the ues of manure gave a yield of 340 pounds of soy bean hay to the acre, but when limestone was applied in addition to manure, the yield of bean hay was 1,700 pounds an acre. The field that received no treatment returned about the same as where manure had been spread. The increase resulting from limestone, when it was applied in addition to manure, amounted to 1,360 pounds, or more than a half ton to the acre.

Another experiment field consisting of a yellow-gray silt loam gave somewhat better yields. Soil with no treatment returned 1,040 pounds of soy bean hay to the acre; the manure treatment improved the yield to an average of 1,420 pounds, and applications of both manure and limestone jumped the harvest to 2,980 pounds, or practically a ton and a half of hay to the acre.

The response to manure over no treatment amounted to 380 pounds, while the response to manure and limestone over manure alone was 1,560 pounds an acre. However, manure and limestone gave returns of 1,940, or nearly a ton to the acre, over the plot which did not receive any treatment.

Crested Wheatgrass Gets Good Start, Lasts Longer

One reason why forage specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture are enthusiastic over the merits of crested wheatgrass for planting the drier lands taken out of wheat production this year is the fact that this grass is able to grow at lower temperature than most grasses. Because of this, crested watergrass gets an early start in the spring and is one of the last grasses to become dormant in the fall.

A stockman who has a pasture of crested wheatgrass is fairly sure to have good grazing for stock for a week or ten days earlier than he otherwise would, and he may be able to stretch the grazing season again in the fall. The advantages of deferred grazing to allow pastures and ranges to recuperate after intensive use are becoming better known. Crested wheatgrass adds a new advantage of a longer season of keeping cattle on grass. Crested wheatgrass is also distinctively drought resistant and will endure extreme cold.

Plumpness in Oats

How much hull there is in a sample of oats cannot be judged by the plumpness of the kernels. This was shown by tests made by the Minnesota agricultural experiment station, which in 1930, '31 and '32, tested several recommended varieties of oats to determine hull percentages. There was very close agreement between results from tests at University farm and at Crookston, the average of all tests showing the following hull percentages: Rainbow, 25.1 per cent; Minrus, 26.1; Gopher, 26.6; Iogold, 27, and Anthony, 30.2. The studies were made because of common opinion among farmers that varieties with plump-appearing grains, such as Anthony and Gopher, have less hull than those like Minrus and Minota with grains of thinner appearance.

Early Public Baths

General hydrotherapy was introduced by Asleplades and no less than 1,800 public baths had been founded during the period 334 B. C.-180 A. D.

Shrimps Are Productive

A shrimp spawns but once in its life, Science News Letter states, but it may produce as many as 800,000 eggs in this single reproductive period.

No "Lion Tamers"

There is no such thing as a "lion tamer." He is a lion trainer. Lions and tigers can never be "tamed" and always are dangerous, says a trainer.

ALVARADO WEEKLY NEWS

MANY NEW USES FOR ICE AID IN HOUSEKEEPING

Here's a trick that's better than skimming to remove the grease that rises when you're cooking soup or stew. Chip off a small piece from the ice in your ice refrigerator. Wrap it in cheese cloth and pass it rapidly over the surface of the hot stew or soup. All the grease will adhere to the ice-chilled cloth, leaving the soup or stew clearer and more digestible.

There are dozens of these little ways in which the plentiful supply of crystal-clear ice in your ice refrigerator can be of help to you. How many of them do you know? Expert bakers, for instance, use ice to make their pie crust lighter and shorter. The water from melted ice is also ideal for delicate washing because it's so pure and soft. Cracked ice held against one' throat will almost always put a stop to an attack of hiccoughs. And, of course, ice applied directly to the skin is a beauty aid recommended by many famous specialists.

KNIGHTS TO INSTALL OFFICERS THIS EVENING

Officers of the Centerville Council, Knights of Columbus, will be seated at ceremonies to be held tonight at the Parish Hall. Deputy E. J. Welsh, of Alameda, will be guest of honor and installing officer.

Officers to be installed are: Louie Mayer, grand knight M. F. Silva, deputy grand knight; George Kommas, chancellor; Geo. Roderick, secretary; Tom Maloney, warden; George Coit, treasurer; Joe Duarte, A. P. Rose and Frank Souza, trustees.

ALARM LIGHT WILL TELL WATCHMAN OF PROWLERS

Night patrol by Don Bates, Centerville watchman, will be made still more effective following the installation of a night warning light on the siren tower. The light was authorized by the fire commissioners and installed by A. S. Enos.

Purpose of the light, which is a brilliant blue, is to warn Bates that prowlers are in the district. Residents who notice suspicious activities at night are instructed to call Centerville 164, and tell their fears. The light will be turned on, and Bates, noticing it from his beat will phone and learn of the location of the disturbance.

The light is the culmination of an effort to make the patrol of the town even more complete.

FIRST CARLOAD OF TOMATOES ARE SHIPPED EAST

Eastern states will get their first real taste of fancy grade Washington township tomatoes this week when the first carload of the succulent vegetable reaches its destination after being dispatched Tuesday by the H. P. Garin company at Centerville.

Previous to the shipment Tuesday, local tomatoes had been sent in small quantities as part of mixed car lots. The car sent this week was laden with first grade produce. According to Garin officials, the tomato crop in this district is good, with a large per cent of fancy grade.

In addition to the tomato packing, the Centerville plant is busy with celery, beets, turnips, late peas and lettuce.

BLAZE THREATENS TO DESTROY HOMES ON MAIN STREET

Centerville's down-town residential section was threatened with a serious conflagration yesterday morning, when fire broke out in the basement of a house owned by Mrs. M. Silva, on Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Santos, who are living at the place, were at a loss to account for the origin of the blaze, which was extinguished before a great deal of damage was done.

According to Frank Madruga, assistant chief, the firemen were faced with a sharp battle to subdue the blaze. He stated that it was necessary to bring both fire trucks to the scene. In discussing the fire further, Madruga said a few minutes' more delay would have resulted in widespread destruction, owing to the fact that the houses are extremely close together.

GARINTEES LOSE CLOSE CONTEST TO HAYWARD

Errors in the first inning, in which their opponents tallied four runs, offset the excellent hitting of the Centerville Garintees Sunday when they played the Hayward Eagles at Hayward, and finally beat the Centerville aggregation by a score of seven to four.

Garnering fourteen hits, the Garin boys were able to cross the plate only four times. Roderick, starting for the Garins was retired in the fifth in favor of Silva, who fanned five men and allowed only two hits. The damage was done, however, in the first inning. In addition to hurling steady ball, Silva, batted four for four; a home run, a triple and two singles.

Depression Hits Santa Monica PELICANS

There's a story that comes out of Southern California. It's about the pelicans of Santa Monica Bay and these pelicans remind us of a lot of us human beings. The experience teaches us that more and better sales effort is required of every last one of us.

For years these pelicans had been fed by fishermen from their surplus catch, until they got the habit of eating without work.

This year high seas changing currents off Santa Monica cut down the catch, and fishermen no longer had any fish to spare. They noticed that the pelicans languished and grew thin and it dawned on them that they had forgotten how to fish for themselves. So they went down the coast and found some unpampered pelicans who had never been ruined by easy living and free fish. They turned them loose among the starving birds, who sat about on the beach and complained of hard times.

The way those imported pelicans went out after their own fish was an eye-opener. Pretty soon the hungry natives quit watching and tried it themselves. They discovered there are plenty of fish in the sea for the bird with energy and enterprise. And they've quit talking about the hard times."

Pleasanton Takes Active Steps In Securing Army Air Corps Training School

Active steps toward bringing the proposed United States Army Air Corps training school to Pleasanton were taken by the members of the Pleasanton Junior Chamber of Commerce at a business meeting held at the City Hall recently.

Active plans to bring the proposed training school to Pleasanton begun recently when Jimmie Trimingham, secretary of the Pleasanton Junior Chamber received a communication from the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, stating that the federal government is seeking a desirable location in the east bay area for the air corps technical school, which is at present located in Illinois. The government is abandoning the Illinois field in prospects of building one in the east bay area.

It has been pointed out that Pleasanton has fine climatic conditions for an air school. Pleasanton has practically no foggy mornings and the wind is always blowing through the valley. All the citizens of the community are very interested in the proposed school and are willing to give full co-operation in securing the new site.

Merryl C. Shaver, Oakland attorney, who played an important part in securing the location of the air base at Sunnyvale, attended the Lions club meeting Wednesday evening held at Letham's, at Pleasanton, and gave a talk on the proposed air training school.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce meeting held last Thursday was presided over by vice president Andy Jorgensen. He officially discharged all committees appointed for the Fourth of July celebration. The celebration this year was postponed in order to co-operate with the health officers in the control of infantile paralysis.

Better Breakfasts

IN the rose covered cottage over which the June bride presides, her new husband soon finds out whether he has married her for better or for worse breakfasts. What good are all the lovely wedding china and the crisp new linens if the morning finds only tomato juice and coffee on the breakfast table? One of the fundamental rules for a long and happy marriage is: "Begin every day with a substantial breakfast and make it as interesting as possible."

Here's a good menu for the June bride's book:

Tomato and Sauerkraut
Cold Cereal with Cream
French Toast with Fruit Cover
Coffee

French Toast with Fruit Cover: Beat two eggs slightly. Add a few grains salt and half a cup milk. Dip four large thick slices of bread in this mixture, coating thoroughly. Sauté in bacon fat or butter until a nice brown on both sides. Split four large slices canned pineapple each into two thin rings and sauté them in a little butter until golden brown on both sides. Lay a slice of toast on each breakfast plate, cover with two pineapple rings and top them with cold juicy rhubarb sauce. This serves four.

"Coffee in the Morning"

"I've one ambition — it's just a simple thing—
I want to be the one—who has the right to bring you
Your coffee in the morning—"

This popular song has a romantic idea—if the coffee is good! And of course it is, in the homes of today's brides. They know that only air-free coffee makes coffee that is mellow and rich. So they buy vacuum packed coffee which locks out the air and keeps the coffee fresh and full of flavor until it is ready to be used.*

Former Oakland Man Is Called Beyond Tuesday

Members of the Alisal district, Pleasanton, are mourning the death of Lynn Stanley, who passed away last Tuesday morning at an Oakland hospital following a lingering illness of one and a half years of heart trouble.

Stanley and his wife have been living at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Newton, Pleasanton, for almost two years. He was the husband of Mrs. Newton's daughter, Pearl. The couple formerly lived in Los Angeles where Stanley was assistant manager of the Los Angeles hotel, but due to his health he was forced to give up the hotel business.

He was a very prominent hotel manager of several Oakland hotels and was well known throughout the east bay. He was a member of the Oakland Elks.

Stanley was a native of Indiana and was forty-nine years of age at the time of his passing. He came to California when a young boy where he remained until his death.

Funeral services were conducted from the Graham Mortuary Thursday afternoon. Services were conducted under the auspices of the Oakland Elks club and Rev. R. C. Cross, pastor of the Pleasanton Presbyterian church.

He is mourned by his wife, Mrs. Pearl Stanley and daughter, Mrs. Jeanette Balock, and two sons, Lynn, Jr., and Donald Stanley, all of Oakland.

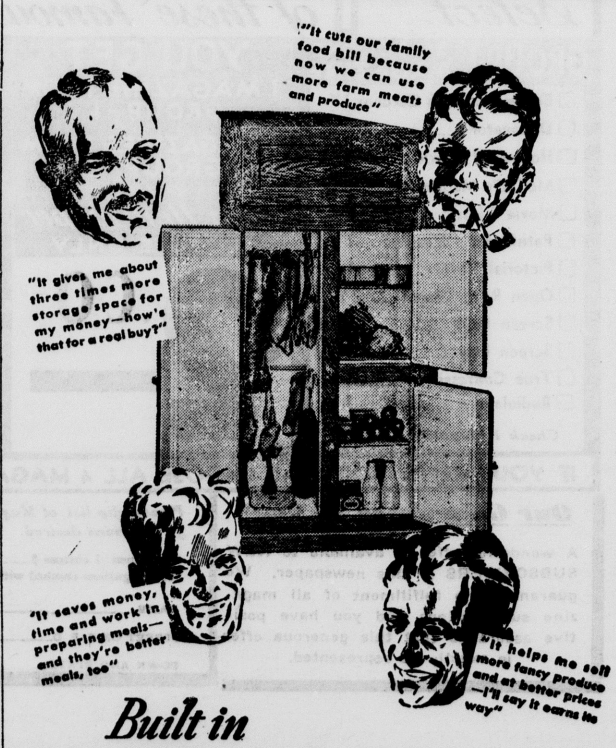
PLEASANTON LIONS HEAR TALK ON ARMY AIR CORPS

At a social meeting held at Letham's, members of the Pleasanton Lions club listened to a lecture given by M. G. Shaver, who spoke on the proposed Army Air Corps training school to be located in California in the near future.

Pleasanton citizens are interested in having the air school constructed there.

The meeting followed a dinner. About twenty-two members were present.

Register posters--something new, different every time.



"It cuts our family food bill because now we can use more farm meats and produce"
"It gives me about three times more storage space for my money—how's that for a real buy?"
"It saves money, time and work in preparing meals—and they're better meals, too"
"It helps me sell more fancy produce and at better prices—I'll say it earns its way"

Built in EARNING POWER

HERE'S GOOD NEWS if you thought you couldn't afford an electric refrigerator. Several leading manufacturers have built a brand new FARM refrigerator. It has all the important features of the University of California design, plus many new improvements. We promise that it surpasses anything you have ever seen before.

The Farm "25"—smallest of the new models, is pictured above. Here is an ideal size for the average farm. Ruggedly constructed for a lifetime of heavy-duty service, it is nevertheless extremely inexpensive. And it may be operated for as little as 5c a day.

The Farm "25," however, is only one of the new models. Others are available up to 125 cubic feet capacity. Or if you are handy with tools, you can even build one yourself—we will supply the plans. The important thing is to get an electric refrigerator on the job at once. California winters are no protection against food-spoilage and the losses in summer are tremendous.

THE FARM "25"
25 CUBIC FEET—ABOUT THREE TIMES MORE CAPACITY PER DOLLAR INVESTMENT THAN DOMESTIC TYPE REFRIGERATORS
